THE DRAFT IN ITS RELATION TO FOREIGNERS.

The President's recent proclamation in regard to the draft of foreign persons residing in this country seems to have given rise to considerable discussion through a misapprehension as it would seem. Persons of foreign birth, who have become naturalized, are sovereign citizens, and, as such, are amenable to the draft and all other laws, like native born citizens. But there is a class of foreign residents who are not full citizens, but who have taken out their first papers and declared their intentions to become citizens, and yet who have not taken all foreign allegiances. After this inchoate step, these persons must wait, according to our laws, some considerable time before they can complete their declarations, and become naturalized into full citizenship. In the mean time, they would appear to be neither under foreign allegiance, exactly, nor yet to be fully American citizens. The relation of these persons to the Conscription Act seemed to offer a knotty question to be settled, and which was started by Lord Lyons' denying, that, the taking out of the "first papers" was conclusive evidence of a man's intention to forswear allegiance to his native land; on the ground, that it took a time and elapsed before the act of his assuming allegiance to this country, and rendered all foreign allegiance, could be considered.

But, for some time, our government have acted upon the principle, that persons who had declared their intention to become citizens are really such, so far as related to foreign governments. Captain Ingraham's act in rechartering the Polish refugees which was sanctioned by our government and people, and which might have involved us in war with Austria, is a case in point. The Conscription Act is also based upon a recognition of this construction.

The President's proclamation saves all diplomatic difficulties in the matter and ends the Gordon case, by simply giving all such persons as have become half-citizens, by taking out their "papers," the opportunity of fighting, paying or emigrating within the specified time of supplies days, which said time will expire on the 11th day of July next evening. The alternative is with them. If they wish to remain and claim the privileges of citizens and the protection of the government, they must and ought to help in its maintenance—otherwise they are at liberty to visit "sweet, sweet home," as to those who have declared no intentions, and are fit subjects of a foreign government, why, doge to remain and pursue their avocations as usual, unmolested. Their status is not electio non potest or one title," by the bearings of the Conscription Act. This all seems fair enough, and the plain common sense of the President will save Secretary Seward many long and diplomatic papers about twaddledum and twaddle.

THE MUSSET QUESTION.

Many of our readers will remember the very important trial in this city last summer before the U. S. Circuit Court, of the case, Samuel Norris vs. Providence Tool Company. One of the points over which that case turned was, that muskets made for United States service and which would be received as such under a government contract, must be made in one building, under one roof, that the nicely fitting adjustments required were of so delicate a nature as could not be performed by assembling parts of a musket from different manufacturers. But this point is vital in the decision of that celebrated case, seems now to be decided the other way. The Boston papers inform us that the contract for furnishing the State of Massachusetts, with 15,000 muskets of the Springfield pattern has been awarded to this same Samuel Norris, whose partner Wm T. Cushing. The delivery of the articles is to commence on the 1st of August and each distinct part is to be made in ten different factories, and put together or assembled by the contractor, who has no right to interfere at all. Mr. Norris is also delivering muskets under a contract to the General Government, but have been examined and stamped first class, and which were made in this way. Thus, you will see, that the idea that muskets can not be made unless under one roof, is an exploded one.

Leaving the Netherlands. One of the steamers of the Hamburg and American Steamship company, lately arrived at New York, brought a large package of fine linen and flint locks, and these contributed by the friends of the cause, left the Rhine for the benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers. Some of the packages were of fine linens, and all were made of the best material. Every package bore the name of "Eduard, Bavaria, For the Wounded Defenders of the United States."

Arrived at New York. The Norwich Bulletin says that 500 ex-slaves, who with the family of Elias H. Brown, of Mystic, were absent from home, the former were sold for $170 in money, and about $25 worth of jewelry and dress, by theсыan girl, who was absconded and proceeded as a spy at New York. It was ascertained that she had a bunch of keys in her possession with which she was able to open every door in the house. On the 12th, at the departure of the girl, a letter came to the house directed to her, which was found to contain the intelligence that her master had been sent for six months to the penitentiary in New York, for robbing. The daughter did not dare to speak with her mother.

Local News Items.

ADDRESS OF REV. H. S. WHITE.—Last evening there was quite a good audience assembled at Aquidneck Hall, to listen to the address of Rev. B. S. White, Chaplain of the 5th R. I. Regiment. There would have been a much larger gathering but for the threatening rain, and the late hour of completing the arrangements for a place of meeting.

At the hour appointed, the speaker came in accompanied by His Honor the Mayor, Col. Tew, and Capt. Belger. Mayor Cranston introduced them, in a very happy address, in which he paid deserved compliments to the Chaplain, Col. Tew, and Captain Belger—alluding particularly to some interesting reminiscences in regard to the frankness with which Col. Tew responded to the first call for men when he commenced that military career, which has been so signal a success, and honorable throughout.

Rev. Mr. White then commenced his address. He began with a description of their location at Newport N. C., and of the situation of Gen. Foster at Washington about 10 miles distant by land and 120 miles by water—where he had been besieged by the rebels, for the space of fifteen days. The situation of Gen. Foster and his devoted command was well known to their connexes at Newport. The rebel blockade it must be understood, extended only to the distance of ten miles across his wings, was shot flat. Thursday, on the beach near Watch Hill, by Capt. Elmer Hall—Newport Daily Times.

Mr. Cranston requested all who wished to contribute vegetables or money to leave the same with him, and he would forward them forwarded.

Philip E. L. of the Aquidneck House, with his characteristic liberality, furnished the Hall for the evening free of charge.

Gen. Frazee or Justin G. Stevens, Esq., was summoned yesterday afternoon from his late residence at Union Street. Rev. Mr. Malcolm, of the 2nd Baptist Church, officiated. Rev. Mr. Child of Zion Church, Rev. Mr. Brooks of the Unitarian Church, and Rev. Dr. Dumont, were also present. The funeral was attended by the members of St. John's Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, by the members of the Mechanics' Society and by a large number of our citizens.

Peterson's Magazine for May came to hand early in the month and should have been noticed before, but was missed. It is an exceedingly rich number containing thirty-seven Articles, and forty-six illustrations. There is also a very pretty "Rhubarb" by Mrs. Warner, and a poem from the skit, "Mayday my Maryland." Circle, J. Peterkin, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

The second attempt was that of Gen. Spring. It was made by land and they succeeded in getting as far as Birch Creek about 15 miles this side of Washington. There however met by a superior force of the enemy and driven back. The speaker, here alluded to the valiant services of Belger's Battery in this engagement, in which Capt. Belger was shot through the thigh, the ball passing entirely through and lodging in his bone. Mr. White exhibited the ball to the audience.

The third attempt was that of Gen. Spring.

It was made by land and they succeeded in getting as far as Birch Creek about 15 miles this side of Washington. There however met by a superior force of the enemy and driven back. The speaker, here alluded to the valiant services of Belger's Battery in this engagement, in which Capt. Belger was shot through the thigh, the ball passing entirely through and lodging in his bone. Mr. White exhibited the ball to the audience.

The fourth attempt was the successful one, made by the immortal 5th R. I., and was made by water. The steamer Escort on Friday the 11th day of April, was laden with provisions, and a large amount of powder and ammunition. When all was ready the 5th R. I. Regiment, under Col. Sisson and Lieut. Col. Tew, embarked on board, and called the Portsmouth Light Infantry. The following officers have been elected: Captain—John Gould, 1st Lieutenant—Daniel H. Allen, 2d Lieutenant—Ivan P. Durke 2d. A company has also been organized in Little Compton, numbering 110 men and have elected Thomas W. Sanford Captain; Benjamin S. Peere 1st Lieutenant; O. P. Peeler 2d Lieutenant. Letters have been received which go to show that the Second R. I. Regiment, behaved with great bravery at the battle in Virginia having been in the thickest of the contest, and their new comander, Col. Rogers, who had never before been under fire, behaved with the greatest valor, leading his men and cheering them on, in the most gallant manner. Col. Rogers was appointed in consequence of the promotion of their former Colonel Frank Wheaton, who has been promoted to Brigadier General. Since his promotion Gen. Wheaton has received a splendid set of equipments from the collected men of the Second Rhode Island Volunteers, as a testimonial of their appreciation of him, both as a man and an officer. He following is the roster of the U. S. Hospital at Portsmouth Grove which we take from an extended report of the condition of Hospital, in the Providence Press of last evening:

The following is the roster of the Hospital, kindly furnished us by Dr. J. W. Cushing:

- I. A. Edwards, Surgeon U. S. Army in charge.
- Capt. F. C. Ulysses S. Grant, Quartermaster.
- W. F. Conklin, Assistant Surgeon U. S. A.
- H. E. Brown, Surgeon U. S. A.
- J. W. Morrison, Surgeon U. S. A.
- J. M. Long, Surgeon U. S. A.
- A. M. Pease, Acting Assistant Surgeon U. S. A.
- H. B. Knobell, Surgeon U. S. A.
- L. Sylphath, Surgeon U. S. A.
- J. W. Cushing, Surgeon U. S. A.
- S. Ingalls, Surgeon U. S. A.
- W. C. McMillan, Surgeon U. S. A.
- A. J. Gray, Surgeon U. S. A.
- Wm T. Hendren, Surgeon U. S. A.
- Capt. C. Blodget, First Lieutenant Wm S. Chace, Second Lieutenant J. H. Hammett.

The number of patients in and about the hospital is about one, and there are about six hundred convalescent. By using the tents of the commissary which were displayed by the present substantial buildings, about three thousand patients could easily accommodate and provided for here.

Stonehouse Jackson is no more. He died on Sunday afternoon from the effects of the recent capture of Fort Sumter, and his death is a sad loss to the country. In his death the rebellion loses one of its most ardent supporters, and able general. His name was Thomas J. Jackson. He was a graduate at West Point, where he entered in 1812, of Gen. McClellan and the Field Gen. A. P. Hill. He was graduated in peal standing in 1815, and brevetted 2d Lieutenant of Artillery in July of that year; went to Mexico with Major General Taylor; was brevetted Captain for "gallant and meritorious conduct at Chalpulaquez" a year after. He resigned his commission in the army in 1852, and at the outbreak of the rebellion was Professor in the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington in that State. As Major-General in the rebellion he became one of the most prominent and successful leaders of the South.

The regiment landed safely, and when the town were scattered, and felt that they could cheer them more, they did cheer in such a way, that the speaker said, as never was cheered before. A rebel captain taken prisoner afterwards, declared that he heard those cheers, at a distance of two miles, and knew that the siege was over.

The most joyful welcome was given them by their beloved comrades, who were literally at the point of starvation. It was indeed a rare scene, and will become a historical one.

After a serious action, in which Capt. Belger's battery did yeoman service, the siege was raised, and the gallant regiment returned, and, in consideration of their services, were assigned to the fortifications around their state in Congress, with the letter of the President declining to entertain the proposition. Villandigham then left, and the gallant regiment returned, and, in consideration of their services, were assigned to the fortifications around their state in Congress.

Mr. White closed by stating that Col. Tew and himself were on a mission to procure some medical articles for the comfort of our brave men at Washington. They said he said, vegetables of all kinds, tea, beef and ham, woolen stockings being the only article of clothing needed—and the amount wanted, for this purpose, is one thousand dollars.

A contribution was taken which realized the sum of thirty-four dollars—a good sum for the size of the audience, who were unprepared for it, by any previous notice.

Major Cranston then introduced Col. Tew, who, with his well known modesty, declared he could not make a speech, but as the welfare of the 5th R. I. (and Belger's Battery which he claimed as a part of it,) was dear to him, and as with them now he had lost his lot, he would endorse all that had been said, and still further plead for the claims of our men to be treated and comforted by those who remain at home, in every possible manner. The stockings furnished are coarse and hard to match in and vegetables are scarce, and yet are always necessarily necessary for the health of the men. The intention is to charter a vessel and take out articles of comfort which will cheer these brave men, and make them feel that those at home really think of and care for them, and he knew that Rhode Island would never fail them.

Mayor Cranston requested all who wished to contribute vegetables or money to leave the same with him, and he would forward them forwarded.

Philip E. L. of the Aquidneck House, with his characteristic liberality, furnished the Hall for the evening free of charge.

Gen. Frazee or Justin G. Stevens, Esq., was summoned yesterday afternoon from his late residence at Union Street. Rev. Mr. Malcolm, of the 2nd Baptist Church, officiated. Rev. Mr. Child of Zion Church, Rev. Mr. Brooks of the Unitarian Church, and Rev. Dr. Dumont, were also present.
